Have Robot Dog, Will Travel - Stephanie Pan

A song cycle for the technological age. An ode to abstraction, to ambiguity, to words unsaid.

Experimental electronic art pop performance
Duration: 20-55min. possible

Have Robot Dog, Will Travel is a genre-bending mash up of sound, combining explosive vocals and lush melodies with dirty, gritty beats, noise, delicate drones and fragile landscapes. It is a live performance with an instrumentarium composed of lo-fi electronics, baby synthesizers, toys and toy instruments, found objects, an autoharp, vintage keyboards, and vocal stylings that span pop music to experimental voice to belcanto singing.

Manifold musical layers move independently of each other to create a constantly moving landscape, like little creatures on their own separate paths. In between experimental art pop / virtuosic extended voice / noise / participatory performance, the project appropriates digital aesthetics and sensibilities within the irregular and imperfect world of the human voice and analog instruments.

'AI becomes one with Pan's soaring bel canto style, coaxing an eerie mysticism out of cold coding.'

The Wire (UK) - Claire Sawers

'The most breathtaking work of 2018!'

#1 Avant-Garde Album of 2018
Skug (AT) - Alfred Pranzl

'... a musical cyborg... Virtual reality for the ears. You'll fall in love with it instantly.'

Gonzo(circus) (BE/NL) -
Rene van Peer

'It is a surprising musical journey with a singer who has an unmistakable style of her own.'

Paul Van de Gehuchte - darkentries.be

'The plunge is deep but the fact that she blends so many different aspects is really inspiring. Put this beautiful album close to AGF, Tujiko Noriko, 4AD projects, Malka Spiegel...'

Hubert Heathertoos - Felthat Reviews

'...she delivers an extraordinary album in the field of electronic music and vocal art, which is also fitting for Artrock and Artpop fans.'
